Thatcher may face operation on eye

By Philip Webster Political Reporter

Mrs Margaret Thatcher will learn tomorrow whether she faces an operation on a damaged right eye.

The Prime Minister, it was disclosed yesterday, received treatment over the weekend for what Downing Street described as "minor damage" to the retina, the light sensitive coat-ing at the back of the eye in which the optic nerve terminates, had become separated and she had had treatment to

Mrs Thatcher, who has been advised by her doctors to rest and has cancelled all but the most essential work, will be seen again by her eye surgeon tomorrow, when a decision will be taken on whether further treatment, including laser surgery is necessary. The cause is uncertain but Dr John Henderson, Mrs That-cher's personal physician, said yesterday that Mrs Thatcher had complained about the problem at the Royal Garden Party at Buckingham Palace last Wednesday, when she had rubbed her eye rather vigorous-ly after feeling irritation.

Downing Street said last night that Mrs Thatcher thought she had a bit of dust in her eye at that party, although she did not know if that was the reason.

Dr Henderson said Mrs Thatcher had seem "unfussed" by it all. Surgery would be considered tomorrow if an examination showed that there had been no improvement. If the specialist was not satisfied with progress "the only thing to do is some sort of glueing on process," he said. Lasers were sometimes used to plaster the retina back into its proper position.

Downing Street, which de-clined to give details of where the treatment had taken place or who had carried it out, said last night: "We hope the treatment has been successful. We have no reason to assume it will not be".

Dr Henderson said that Mrs Thatcher was "slightly bored" at having her work interrupted. Although she did not have a heavy work schedule this week she postponed interviews with magazines.

Journalism gets first professor

By Our Education Correspondent

Mr John Dodge, director of information at the Inner London Education Authority, has been appointed to run the journalism course at the City University in London. He will be the first professor of journalism in Britain.

Mr Dodge, aged 53, who was director of the National Council for the Training of Journalists for eight years, hopes to turn the City University into a centre for refresher courses for journal-ists in mid-career. He said that it would also be useful for editors to be able to meet to discuss their work. "When you think how much training the ILEA puts on for teachers and the number of teachers' centres it had, you realize there is nothing like it in journalism," he said yesterday.

Mr Dodge, who will start his new job later this year, was responsible for establishing tising and Marketing Education Foundation, which also ran for three years.

The City University course university postgraduate courses in Britain, has been running for seven years. It takes about 25 home and 25 overseas stodents each year. The course includes periodical and radio journalism, and virtually all students have secured jobs.

Breaking the logjam to clear a path to the top

By Peter Hennessy

A Whitehall economist's life can be precarious, particularly if the practitioner is engaged on the "number crunching" side of the craft.

Mr Denis Healey, when Chancellor of the Exchequer, said he hoped to do for economic forecasters what the Boston Strangler had done for door-to-door salesmen. The Treasury did not mind. It was remarks like that which made Mr Healey lovable.

A change of government in 1979 brought Mr Nigel Lawson into the Treasury as Financial Secretary. In terms of temperament and physique, if not of policy, the Treasury sees Mr Lawson as the continuation of Mr Healey by another means. (After a spell at the Department of Energy he is now back as Chancellor.) In 1979 Mr Lawson wanted to strangle the Treasury model of the British economy and all but persuaded his then senior minister, Sir Geoffrey Howe, to do so on the grounds that it was Keynesian, ignored the Treasury forecasting was saved in early 1980 by Sir Tereuce brought in from the London Business School at the age of 35 to be chief economic adviser. A forecaster of repute, he enjoyed the confidence of the Thatcherites.

He undertook a review and thanks to his report the model was reprieved, give or take a few technical adjustments. The Treasury still has about 30 forecasters with Sir Terence as the interpreter of their findministers.

Earlier this year his contract was extended. In June he was knighted in the birthday honours list and he will now remain in the Treasury until the end of next year. Part of his time will be devoted to internal affairs of the Government Economic Service (GES) which embraces 375 special ists in 24 departments.

Court of Appeal

Device to avoid capital transfer tax fails

Inland Revenue Commissioners v Trustees of Sir John Aird's Before Lord Justice Waller, Lord

Justice Oliver and Lord Justice [Judgment delivered July 25] The tax avoidance device known as the "Newspaper-Franco" scheme

as the "Newspaper-Franco" scheme was ineffective to exempt from the charge to capital transfer tax appointments to beneficiaries of property held by trustees on discretionary trusts. The scheme did not succeed in bringing into operation the exemption from charge contained in paragraph 6(7) of Schedule 5 to the Finance Act 1975.

The Court of Appeal in reserved The Court of Appeal in reserved judgments allowed an appeal by the Crown from the decision of Mr Justice Nourse (The Times, December 21, 1981; [1982] I WLR 270) who had held that appointments of settled property made to Sir George John Aird and Miss Susan Aird were not chargeable to the tax. The trustees of the settlem were refused leave to appeal.

On November 28, 1975, the trustees of the late Sir John Renton Aird's discretionary settlement made two irrevocable appointments made two interocatine appointments of parts of the settled property in favour of two of the settlor's children. Sir George John Aird (Sir John) and Miss Susan Aird.

The appointments were contin-gent on the appointness surviving for one day "the person whose death shall occur on Saturday. November 29, 1975, and who shall be the first (in alphabetical order) of the persons dying on that date to be named in the deaths column on the back page of the earliest edition of the personner called The Times vspaper called The Times published in London on Monday, December 1, 1975 for if there shall be no edition of The Times published on that date then of the earliest edition of that newspaper which is next published in London after that date)".

On December 1, 1975, The Times was published and named Major Peter Bisgood as having died the previous Saturday. The appointees both survived Major Bisgood by the period of one day and thus became absolutely entitled to the appointed determination, stating that by virtue of paragraph 6 (2) of Schedule 5 to the Finance Act 1975, capital distributions of £140,964 and £21,736 on which the tax was payable were to be treated as having been made on the occasion of the appointees becoming absolutely entitled to the property.

Hearing appeals against both notices, the special commissioners upheld the trustees' argument that the provisions of paragraph 6 (7) of Schedule 5 to the Act, exempting from charge beneficiaries of discretionary trusts who on surviving another person for a specified period became entitled to interests in possession as from the in possession as from the other person's death, applied to the appointments. Both notices were

Mr John Knox, QC and Mr Michael Hart for the Crown; Mr Edward Nugee, QC and Mr Robert Walker, QC for the trustees. LORD JUSTICE OLIVER said that capital transfer tax was first introduced in 1975. The Finance Act 1975 contained transitional provisions enabling discretionary settlements to be taken out of the onerous discretionary regime at 1976, the charging provisions on their face permitted transfers from their face permitted transfers from the "discretionary regime" into the "interest in possession regime without any charge at all by the simple device of appointing the settled funds in a perticular way. That arose because it was decided for good reason that an exemption ought to be provided to meet a situation which would have involved double taxation of the same property as a result of the same disposition.

according to one's point of view, the legislature, in leaving deliberately a loophole for the obvious case of hardship, contrived, so it was claimed, to open a gateway wide enough to accommodate the proverbial coach and horses.

Paragraph 6(7) was intended to relieve settled property from the charge under paragraph 6(2) in certain circumstances. The difficulty was in determining the ambit of the provision. All that it appeared to receive was an appointment of to require was an appointment of the property so that vesting was (a) period some conveniently selected moribund person, and (b) was, on becoming unconditional, dated back to that person's death.

However taxes were not normally contemplated as being optional and unless there was to be ascribed to the legislature a wholly irrational and unusual benevolence towards beneficiaries of settled property, it had to be assumed that in framing this exemption, it had some more limited object in mind.

what appeared to be a glaring anomaly was that Parliament had in mind a particular hardship that it was trying to meet and that was the double taxation which would otherwise arise under paragraph otherwise arise under paragraph (2) in the relatively common case of a testator providing in his will against the contingency of a beneficiary dying at the same time as the testator, for instance in an accident, but being deemed to have survived him by reason of the presumption that the elder of two commorientes was the first to die.

apparent in paragraph 6(7) and is was not altogether surprising that the tax-avoidance industry was not slow to avail itself of the opportunity presented to it.

It was, for instance, widely reported in 1975 that General reported in 1975 that General Franco was dving and in a number of cases appointments were made conditional upon the appointee surviving him by a short period. Tax advisers being nothing if not ingenious, had then devised a variant of the Franco scheme designed to avoid the inconvenient obstinacy of a decedent to die by selecting the date of his death in advance. The instant case was such an example.

an example. The Crown's case was somewhat different from that argued before Mr Justice Nourse. Mr Knox submitted that since paragraph 6(7) exempted only cases where the propositus became entitled to an interest in possession "on" surviving another person, that imported, as a matter of construction, that the survival was, looked at at the time when the instrument creating the interest condition standing between the beneficiary and the interest. As an alternative he submitted that it had to be demonstrated that gency on which the interest depended and that, on analysis, that was not here satisfied.

The Crown also placed two further arguments before the court that had not been raised before. The first was that the words "another person" in paragraph 6(7) could not mean any person in the world but had to be regarded restrictively as referring only to a person upon whose death a transfer of value tool or was deemed to take place which included the value of the settled property in which the interest in On the face of it that sounded as if it involved the addition to the subparagraph of a formidably complicated qualification. It really amounted to rewriting it entirely in order to give effect to what was, at best, a conjectural intention and without any other context in the Act That would be for the court to legislate rather than to construe. There was no justification for departing from the literal meaning of the words. Thus that additional argument for the Crown was inacceptance.

There was equal difficulty in accepting their other contention — namely, that "another person" had as a matter of construction to mean as a matter of construction to mean a particular person or one whose identity fell to be established by something other than a process of random selection. There was no context for qualifying "person" with some adjective such as "particular" or "named".

Returning to the Crown's primary way of putting their case, Mr Knox argued that paragraph 6(7) applied only where under the relevant trusts, the contingency of surviving another person for the requisite period was the sole contingency on which the interest was made to depend. Thus, he said, you have to look at the trusts at the moment when they came into operation and ascertain whether, at that date, the interest under consideration depended on anything other than

That view could not be accepted.
Certainly it had to be demonstrated that the survival of the relevant person by the requisite period was what, in the event, caused the interest to vest, but there was nothing in the paragraph requiring Mr Knox's alternative argument was more formidable. The paragraph could not, he submitted, apply to any case save one where survival of another person for the requisite period was genuinely the contingency on which in the event the interest depended. He submitted that as a matter of construction the appointment in the instant case required that Sir John survive not to some uncertain point of time calculated by reference to the time of death of the decedent but to a time which could be predicated at the date of the appointment - namely, midnight on November 30, 1975.

From that he proceeded to the submission that the contingency on which the interest actually depended was something quite other than surviving the death of another person.

Mr Knox was right in submitting that what the appointment required was that Sir John should survive until midnight on November 30.

Moreover the true effect of the appointment was that Sir John became entitled to an interest in possession not "on" surviving Major Bisgood by one day but on a quite different contingency.

The critical thing that caused the death of a person but was the event of the relatives of some person who died on that Saturday causing a notice of his death to be notified in time for inclusion in Monday's Times and the subsequent publi-cation of that newspaper. What caused the interest to vest was either Sir John's surviving that insertion and publication until midnight on Sunday or if the publication took place after midnight, the publication took

That was the reality of the position and that was not on surviving another person for a specified period" unless the word "on" was used (as it could not have been) in the purely temporal sense of denoting the termination of the specified period.

The appeal should be allowed. Lord Justice Waller delivered a concurring judgment and Lord Justice Robert Goff agreed. Solicitors: Solicitor of Inland Revenue; Travers Smith Braith-waite & Co.

Burns v Burns Before Lord Justice Waller, Lord Justice Fox and Lord Justice May [Judgment delivered July 26]

The Court of Appeal, dismissing an appeal by a mistress who claimed an appear by a misuress who chaimed a share in a bouse owned by a man with whom she had been living for 19 years, said that housekeeping duties and bringing up children were not factors which could be taken into account and that although it was unfair that the mistress should have no rights against the man on the breakdown of the relationship that was a matter which could only he courts.

plaintiff, Mrs Valerie Burns who had changed her name by deed poil, had appealed from a decision Mr Justice Dillon on March 1, 1982 that she had no interest in the house at 143 Oxidge Lane, Southgate, London, which was held in the sole name of the defendant, Mr Patrick King Burns. Mr Quintin Iwi for the plaintiff,

As for the position in the years after the house was purchased, it would be unreal to say that, overall, she had made a substantial financial contribution towards the family

His Lordship did not find support for that in the other authorities and did not think that it was consistent with principle.

It was not clear to what extent the matter was material in Hall v Hall. So far as looking after children was concerned, it appeared that there were no children.

That case seemed to have proceeded on the concession made by the man that the woman was entitled by way of resulting trust to a share in the house. The parties had lived together for seven years and it was accepted by the man that they could not have bought the house but for the fact that both were earning. The parties, in fact, pooled their

Accordingly, that case might well have been one where the woman, through the pooling of their income. made a contribution, direct or indirect to the mortgage payments. In his Lordship's opinion, the plaintiff had failed to demonstrate.

For those reasons the appeal had to be dismissed. His Lordship would only add that the plaintiff had entered upon her relationship with the defendant knowing that there was no prospect of his marrying her.

She lived with him for 19 years as man and wife and, at the end of it, had no rights against him. But the unfairness of that was not a matter which the courts could control. It was a matter for Parliament. LORD JUSTICE MAY, agreeing, said that if a man and woman married, acquired a home, lived in it together, brought up children, but sadly, sooner or later separated and divorced, the courts had a wide discretion to adjust their subsequent respective financial situations under Causes Act 1973.

In particular the court had power

However, it was becoming increasingly frequent that couples lived together without being married but just as if they were so. They acquired a home for themselves and their children whom they brought up in the same way as the family next door.

Nevertheless it also happened, just like their married friends, that lifferences arose between the couple and they separated. In some cases the couple agreed what was to happen to their joint home.
But if they did not agree they went to the courts for the resolution of their dispute. In such a case there was no statute which gave the court similar powers to those which it had as between husband and wife. His Lordship agreed that the principles the court must apply were those laid down in the two cases of Gissing v Gissing ([1970] AC 386).

As Parliament had not legislated for the unmarried couple as it had for those who had, the courts should themselves.

It followed that in disputes between unmarried couples who had broken up, the courts did not they thought was fair and reason-able in all the circumstances, as they had under the appropriate pro-visions of the Matrimonial Causes Act 1973.

His Lordship thought that the dictum of Lord Denning in Hall v Hall. that the woman's contribution to the family well-being by keeping the house and looking after the children could be taken into account in asserting the written to which. assessing the extent to which a sulting trust had arisen in her favour, was wrong.

When one compared the ultimate result with what it would have been had the plaintiff been married to the defendant and taken appropriate steps under the Matrimonial Causes Act 1973, his Lordship thought that she could justifiably say that fate had not been kind to her. However, the remedy for any inequity was a matter for Parliament and not for

Crime Down Under, part 2: Pornography and drugs

Sex and psychedelics out of control

In the second of two articles on crime in Australia, TONY DUBOUDIN, Melbourne Correspondent, looks at the dimensions of the vice industry. Revelations on the extent of pornography and organized prostitution have particularly the findings of two recent reports on crime in the country. Pornography, according to Mr Donglas Meagher QC, who assisted a royal commission into tax evasion by the Ships Painters and Dockers Union, has become big business with involved and high profits

Russians deride West's oil forecast

From Richard Owen

A leading Soviet economist has poured scorn on Western predictions of a drop in Soviet oil output, claiming that Russia does not need Western technology to develop the energy resources of Siberia.

Writing in Pravda yesterday Mr Abel Aganbegyan said that this year Siberia would provide per cent of the Soviet Union's oil production and over 50 per cent of its gas output. Annual oil extraction was running at about 20 million

"I cannot but remember the short sighted forecasters of the CIA (Central Intelligence Agency), who predicted a fall in oil output in Siberia in the early eighties" Mr Aganbegyan wrote. The CIA had also wrongly forecast that Russia would no be able to develop its oil industry without Western help. Last week the Soviet press emphasized that the completion of the Soviet section of the gas pipeline from Siberia to Western Europe was proof of Russia's ability to "go it alone". Western experts caution that there is an element of bravado in such claims. Compressor stations along the pipeline have not been finished and could present greater problems

As for oil production, output rose marginally in the first six months of this year to 307 million tonnes, but the Russians have to meet both rising domestic demand and commitments to Eastern Europe, experts say. Foreign technology remains crucial to the exploitation of Siberian energy re-

Passion of power

BBCSO/Penderecki

Albert Hall/Radio 3

With a Times profile on Saturday, an interview with the composer on Radio 3 on Sunday morning and a pre-Prom talk in the evening the way was well prepared for the performance of Penderecki's St uke Passion that dominated Sunday night's concert. But perhaps the most miraculous thing about the Penderecki Passion is that it needs almost no introduction at all: it speaks so eloquently and powerfully for itself that nothing impedes its immediacy of impact.

This is the work that took British audience by storm when it was included in the 1967 Proms, and in the intervening years it has lost none of its freshness, its excitement and vigour and its dramatic intensity. Moreover the richness of the score's orchestral and choral palette was enhanced on Sunday by the deeply committed account which Penderecki's own baton drew from the massed forces of the BBC Singers, the BBC Symphony Chorus and Orchestra the choristers of Christ Church Cathedral, Oxford, and the soloists Stephen Roberts (Christ), Marie Slorach and Michael Rippon, David Wilson-Johnson took over at short notice the spoken role of the

The Passion was preceded, aptly, by Bach's Singet dem Herrn, performed by the BBC Singers under John Poole Apuly, because in structure the St Luke Passion is akin to the Passions of Bach in that the gospel narrative is interspersed with passages of commentary and contemplation. But Penderecki treats his subject with an almost operatic breadth and vividness, calling for a chorus that can cope with rabble-like gabbling in such movements as "The Mocking of the High Priest" and "Jesus before Pilate" but can also drop to a whisper in the passacaglia Popule meus".

That this performance was to be one of strength, energy and control was emphasized in the very opening hymn, "O Cruz, ave, spes unica", where the brass, built up layer by layer, provided a thrilling background to the chorus's anguished plea to the Cross.

In climactic effectiveness this was matched at the end of Part I by the chorus's frighteningly demonstrative cry if "Crucifige" and at the end of Part II by the tumultous, triumphant "Dom-ine Deus veritatis", but in fact the entire performance was remarkable both for its depth of feeling and for the sheer virtuosity of the choral singing and orchestral playing.

After the pre-Prom talk one of the questioners asked Penderecki whether he had plans to record the Passion. From my listening-point in the corridor the answer was drowned by an announcement on the Albert Hall public address system, but I can only hope he replied in the

Circle/Radulescu

A good title is an excellent start for any enterprise, and in this Horatio Radulescu, the Romanian composer now domiciled in Paris, has an advantage. Who could resist, at least initially, the appeal of Capricorn's Nostalgic Crickets (Op 16h) or These Occult Oceans (Op 41)? It was nice to meet the crickets again at the ICA on Sunday night (Simon Desorgher had per-formed a different version elsewhere in London earlier this year), as they could be heard almost literally chirping on the seven bass clarinets of the Circle ensemble, which the composer conducted. Even at the start their tightly packed lines contained a fair variety of gesture, but whereas in the earlier stages this tended to cancel out, leaving it all sounding rather the same. towards the end longer and more diverse perspectives emerged, the contrasts of texture and timbre being remarkable. We still kept away from upper registers, however, while affort on the occult-oceans, Mr Radulescu's Op 41 being performed by five bass voices. Four of these were on tape, and the other was the composer's own.

It was another polyphonic exploration, heard, for no very evident reason, in darkness. Mr Radulescu likened it to "a prayer which has forgotten to be related to a historically-deter-mined religion", but the actual effect of the thick, continuous, furry bundling was of old, propeller-driven aeroplanes flying dangerously low.

This was a UK première, and so was the performance of Incandescent Serene (Op 35). This had one of those long. entertainingly imcomprehen-sible, composer-written programme notes, yet proved to be quite enjoyable with its sounding brass - a French horn - and rather frequently tinkling cymbals. A double bass and a double bass flute were involved,

THE ARTS

Opera: John Higgins assesses the climax of the 'British Ring'

Musical vision truly reflected in nature

Götterdämmerung

Bayreuth

Just before 11pm on Saturday the halls of the Gibichung collapsed, Brunnhilde mounted Grane and rode off into the conflagration and Valhalla was consumed with fire and a great deal of smoke. The Hall-Dudley Ring to the last remained as naturalistic as a four-month preparation period would allow.

For the musical side, a little surprisingly for Bayreuth these days, there was nothing but audience approval. Even Manfred Jung, whose detractors earlier let themselves be heard, was cheered for a Siegfried that was resolute and devised with much vocal intelligence, so that the best was reserved for the death scene. More predictably the production team of William Dudley and Sir Peter Hall was faced with a house bursting with cheers and counterboos from top to bottom.

Hall and Dudley, to the obvious fury of sections of the audience, critics and public alike, have stuck with their concept of the Ring as a fairy-story with distinctly adult emotions. In the process they have been accused here both of not providing a sufficiently intellectual interpretation of the Ring and, the cardinal sin in Germany these days, of offering no political standpoint. In the eyes of some they have taken retrograde steps and marched down culs-de-sac. They have spent too much on stage machinery. And yet this new Ring for three-quarters of its length is visually stunning. It has taken the audience, in many cases for the first time in their lives, back to the stage directions Wagner wrote. It has provided a magnificent new Brunnhilde in Hildegard Behrens, who looks like having this role as much to herself in the Eighties as Nilsson did in the Sixties. And it has been conducted by Sir Georg Solti with passionate grandeur counterbalanced by lucid authority.

The question remaining is whether Solti, Hall and Dudley should have bowed to Bayreuth practice and agreed to put on so technically complex a Ring in a single week rather than spreading it over a couple of festivals. The answer on balance is "Yes". Many things have still to be solved or improved. Some seen elements should be unseen and some unseen elements should take stage shape for the Hall-Dudley concept to be realized. At the end of Gotterdammerung, where Wagner packed as much action into five minutes as he did into the two hours of the opening act, Hall and Dudley have not yet come up with images to match the strength and inventiveness of the start of Rheingold. And yet earlier in Gotterdammerung the Rhinemaidens are given a delicate woody grotto, complete with a watery cutting for splashing about in, while they try to coax the ring from Siegfried. The Norus (a highly impressive trio of Annes: Gjevang, Wilkens and the WNO's future Brunnhilde, Evans) were adroitly lodged in a river bank like creatures from the opening of The Wind in the Willows.

William Dudley's greatest successes in this Ring, where the eye is constantly on the look-out for some new surprise, have been in the forest scenes, where nature, stark or grave or dappled, has been a constant reflector of the music. None is better than the formal, tawny wood in which Siegfried meets his death, a Rackham illustration from some grand turn-of-the-century edition of Robin Hood. Here Manfred Jung showed his worth. The tenor tones took on a sheen, as they had done during the previous encounter with the Rhine maidens, which had been missing in Act L Jung sniffed the finishing line and no longer needed to husband his resources. Hall was careful to keep his Siegfried close to the front of the stage and Jung was equally careful to ensure that a sour note was immediately followed by a glorious one. He knows the part backwards and it would not much matter who dropped out of a Ring if Herr Jung were around - he would take over from anyone.

His assassin, Hagen, was Aage -Haugland, massive in form and voice, a triple-dyed villain totally immersed in evil thoughts and a true son of Alberich (Hermann Becht son of Alberich (Hermann Becht again outstanding during his brief appearance). The rulers of the Gibichung, Günther and Gutrune, lacked character. Bent Norup, possibly still recovering from his assumption of Wotan at nil notice a couple of nights earlier, was restrained until a stirring account of the blood-brotherhood duet with Siegfried, "Blühendes Lebens laberades Blut" Josephina Berstony as labendes Blut". Josephine Barstow as his sister was secure enough of voice, but her German was incomprehensible. The disappointment of the evening, surprisingly, was Brigitte Fassbander's Waltraute, often uncomfortably squally and too ready to let the musical temperature drop during her dispute with Brunnhilde.

And so via Norbert Balatsch's chorus, marvellously individualized and trained to peak performance pitch, to Brünnhilde herself, Hildegard Behrens. From the first appearance in Walkure Miss Behrens announced her intention of being a Wagnerian dramatic soprano of the first rank. Her tones have been consistently free and pure, sending a shiver of pleasure down the spine when she is at full throttle. Only the bottom register has a tendency to disappear into the orchestra. She has, quite obviously, struck a working relationship of total understanding with Solti and Hall, being at one with the conductor's tempi and accepting the producer's demands, so that Brunnhilde becomes a warm, vital creature of feminine blood, warrior and lover, abandoned and deceived before finally assuming her father's authority in a gloriously sung Immolation Scene. A great performance in her first Brunnhilde.

Solti and his orchestra were predictably, at their finest in these closing moments. There had been some instrumental fluffs towards the end of a stiflingly hot week together with some playing of extreme delicacy (the prelude to the last scene of Act 1) and sumptuousness (Siegfried's Funeral March). Decca's technicians will indeed have something to capture when they return next year. The company's embarassment will be what to do with Solti's existing Ring.

By next year too there will need to be some recasting, mainly in the minor roles. The Donner and Froh are both overparted by Bayreuth standards; the German mezzos have been disappointing. But this Ring has thrown up a fine clutch of baritones and basses and a very promising new Norwegian soprano, Anne Gjevang, and it has established Hildegard Behrens at the top of her profession. Messrs Hali, Solti and Dudley have had their setbacks, principally with the massive expenditure of time on a Siegfried that wasn't, Reiner Goldberg. They can be well satisfied with their work on the Ring together, the fairy-tale that needs time and technical polishing to come true. Next year there will be no new production, so the chance is there. It is likely to be grasped.

Last month, amid the feast of new shows on in London, there was one which I just did not have the space and time to write about, though were it still on in this month's famine I should no doubt leap upon it with cries of delight. It was Some Master-pieces from Manchester Cay An-Gallery, at David Carritt, and I mention it now only on account of one picture (which, of course, you could always post off to Manchester to see if you missed its London airing): Rhyl Sands, by David Cox. Though I must certainly have seen it before, in Manchester it was never a work I stopped and paid special attention to; in this temporary new context; despite some spectacular competition, it stood right out from the wall.

How, one asked oneself, could a work of so much glittering light and joyous freedom in the handling of paint, a classic Impressionist canvas if you ever saw one, have been painted in Britain in the early 1850s?

And, one might have added by David Cox of all people? Happily, the answer to the second part of the enigma was at hand. Since it happens to be the bicentenary of Cox's birth this year, Birmingham, where he came from and ended his days, has decided to stage the necessary major commemoration with David Cox 1783-1859, at the city Art Gallery until October 14 (after which it comes to the Victoria and Albert in November). The commemoration is necessary, as well as piously desirable, because Cox tends to be one of those artists who slip all too readily into a convenient pigeonhole where they can be respected and forgotten.

The pigeonhole is belated representative of the classic English watercolour school and to a large extent Cox chose it for himself. He had an uneventful life; and accounts of it are understandably sparse. He never seems_to have had any grand ideas about himself, his talents or the possibilities open to him. He began as journeyman painter, working for toy and papier-maché manufacturers and then at scene-painting for the theatre. He did venture up to the hub of things, London, in 1804, and achieved a measure of recognition among his peers. But he seems to have continued to make the bulk of his living from teaching, and we know that his charges to private pupils remained very low by the standards of the period, while his charges for his own work were scarcely higher. In any case, he seems not to have liked the noise and bustle of London, and took a teaching job in Hereford in 1814, returning to London only in 1827. This time he stayed for 13 years, interspersed with extensive painting trips, and then in 1841 moved back to Birmingham for the rest him for boldness and innovation, and he gradually came to And yet in himself he was not so conservative as all that: it must mean something that he decided, at the age of 57, to take up a hitherto unfamiliar medium, oils, and soon achieved such extraordinary results as Rhyl Sands

Even there, though, he was characteristically modest and tentative one of his biographers tells us that he always "had misgivings that his method of working was not in accordance with the accepted practice". If better. The Birmingham show gives as the first opportunity for his oils all together, and there is no denying that some of them are rather laboured, even what was probably his most famous oil painting in his own day (on account, perhaps, of its exotic subject-matter), The Welsh Funeral of 1848 and its various offshoots and derivatives. But looking at the show as a whole one ceases, paradoxically, to be consciously aware of the distinction between oils and watercolours: evidently Cox's divergence from accepted practice was that, as far as possible, he continued to treat oils as though they were watercolours, and so at his best achieved a quite anachronistic freedom and looseness of handling which makes him look half a century ahead of his time.

The show makes evident, too, that Cox was very much the sort of artist, as one might suppose, who could go on churning out work year in, year out, never falling below a certain superior level of competence and ac-It was clearly his decision, or ceptability. In Britain the struggle against supposed story to The Times, Alan Clark, a parliamentary under secretary at the Department of Employment, was being installed at Westminster as patron of the Conservative Anti-Hunt Council, yet another party-based organization to promote the abolition of hunting.

Political opposition to hunting is relatively recent. The abiding hatred between many champions and opponents of the sport is much older. Each side infiltrates the other. Hunts 'acquire" confidential minutes of antihunting meetings and opponents like the league have intimate knowledge of hunting strategy conferences.

Michael Wright is one of the most successful "moles" that either side in the hunting argument has ever em-ployed. At the time of his undercover operations. Wright was a full-time employee of the league; each year, part of its income (from subscriptions and

He has now left the staff of the league While Michael Wright was telling his and is retained as a consultant awaiting He has now left the staff of the league publication in the autumn of a book about his experiences on the hunting

> Of course, his name is not really Michael Wright, or even Michael Wilkins, in which guise he occasionally appeared last year as the league's press officer. He will probably be better known to many hunt personalities by his real name of Michael Huskisson. He is a qualified science teacher, a vegetarian and a long-standing member of the Hunt Saboteurs' Association.

> He has always shuned publicity, but a few years ago he was unable to avoid headline treatment under his real name. He explaines that in the mid 1970s there was no noticeable political opposition to hunting. What, then, could a young man do?

> "I was involved when I was 22 in the release of two 'smoking beagles' from an ICI laboratory. I appeared in court and was acquitted of theft. Later I was convicted of criminal damage and desecration of the grave of John Peel, and I was sentenced to nine months' mprisonment. There is now a professional political movement to change outdated laws, so I shall dedicate my life to parliamentary reform."

> The crushing general election defeat of Labour, with its first manifesto commitment to abolish hunting, was a severe blow to opponents of the sport. The league hopes that Huskisson's book will be the start of a renewed campaign of pressure on parliament to outlaw the pursuit of live prey with hounds.

> The huntsmen who stood back to let 'Michael Wright" in at the kill with his camera will find themselves in the book. So will the hunt servants who found him such a willing listener. He claims to have a complete dossier of cruelty which will show that hunts tolerate many practices which they claim to ban.

> The league was torn in its desire to convince The Times that the Huskisson story was genuine. It produced many photographs, including some of readily recognized personalities in the hunting world. It is worried that the allegations in Huskisson's forthcoming book might be devalued by its author's criminal record.

> It refused to show his best photographs, which it hopes to sell for a large amount to a Sunday newspaper. But it showed me a film supposedly taken by him of an incident in a mink hunt less than a year ago. It showed a man picking a small animal from the water and throwing it up to the bank behind where it was seized by hounds. The animal moved for long enough for the camera to record that it was alive.

> "I have seen foxes thrown live to two different hunts," Huskisson says. He claims that his book will contain detailed evidence of foxes being sold and of being taken from one hunt's country to another. He says he will produce clear photographic evidence of a fox being let out of a bag in front of hounds and of live quarry being held under water to drown.

He claims that his pictures of stags foulness of normal practice in hunts as well as banned operations like releasing bagged foxes.

Huskisson says he had no qualms about spying on hunts. "I guess I abused the whole trust of hunting. But it is nothing like the abuse of the trust they have with the public. They are conning people all the time." When working under the cover identity of Michael Wright, he followed about 30 of Britain's 200 hunts about 150 times, after many years as a hunt saboteur.

He sometimes worried that the flat cap and plus-fours of "Michael Wright" would not deceive a hunt member who had met him in his previous guise as Huskisson the "sab". He withdrew this year because he feared being caught. Others have been trained to take over when the main hunting seasons open.

The art of undercover work is to do the expected," he explains. "To get into the inner sanctum and see what happens you need to get their trust. What you want them to do is to behave as they normally do. If you are always helpful, then if the pressure is ever on and you are suspected, the people who have helped you will come forward and say so. That gives you cover."

is greatest fear was of a small mistake that would blow his cover. Each side in the hunting argument knows that the other is spying on it, and is accordingly on its guard. Huskisson deliberatley chose an alias with the same first name as his own. "If your real name is not Mike you might not answer if someone in a pub shouts 'Mike' across to you. Then they would know."

He peeled off his British Field Sports Sticker after each day's hunting. After one meet he noticed that he had stuck it back upside down. It was then too late to do anything, but nobody noticed. Huskisson developed a careful ritual to avoid such revealing errors.

"On a typical day I would drive to within about half a mile of the meet and check the car and myself rigorously to make sure there was nothing that could give me away. There were several weak links, including the car. which was owned by the league. But nobody ever challenged me point blank. I targeted myself on the weaker and more stupid elements, and I pushed it as far as I could."

After his careful study of the hunting community he has divided its active participants into nobs and rotters. There is a definite dichotomy," he explains. "There are those who use hunting as a ticket to ride in the countryside. They don't look too closely at what goes on because if they did they might understand what we have been talking about for years. Then there is also an element who are just out-and-out hooligan animal thugs. They are the type who are there just to pit the terrier against the fox."

Understandably reluctant to be photographed, Huskisson then slipped away to a secret address with his memories of hunting. He is in one hideout, while duplicates of his photographs and documents are held in several others. The league hopes to bring them all together in the autumn at bay and quarry being torn apart by and, as Huskisson puts it, "drive the hounds will convince the public of the final nail into the coffin of hunting."

When the cover was blown

The British Field Sports Society said yesterday that it knew by Christmas last year that Wright, Wilkins and Huskisson were one person. It admitted that there was a period last year in which the hunting community did not know that "Michael Wright" was an infiltrator from the League Against Cruel Sports. The society agreed that "Wright" had been invited by one unknowing hunt to give a slide show of his photographs, but the hunt were unperturbed by his efforts and had not tried to expose him in the field. "The league has been trying for a very long time to prove that the codes of conduct of hunting have not been adhered to. The paucity of the evidence it has shown you proves that it has not succeeded." The society, the main umbrella organization for hunting and shooting interests, said the league might be embarrassed by the disclosure of Huskisson's part in the John Peel case.

Facing a blank future

A wonderful thing happened to me the other day. I lost my diary. Now the rest of the year is completely free. My diary, like a super-efficient secretary, had all the details of my life ahead and now that it has skipped the country with my future engagements I find myself a free man. There's always Christmas, of course, which I seem to remember falls on December 25 this year, but as I have no recollection of where I was going to spend it, that too may slip by unnoticed.

Dutifully I went into a stationer's to do

Dutifully I went into a stationer's to do an availability check on diaries in July. (This is a little phrase I have picked up (This is a little phrase I have parked up from showbiz. I'm going to do an availability check on the King's Singers, they say importantly. What they mean is, I'm going to see when they're free. Not much point, really, as the King's Singers are always in Hong Kong or Australia. It would be hard for all six of them to lose their diaries.)

There I discovered that diaries which were selling at £2.90 in January are now down to 40p. Most of them seem aimed at electrical engineers and girl guides. Are these notorious for losing their diaries or for not buying them in the first place? One of life's little mysteries. I also found an exact replica of the diary I had lost, full of addresses of embassies and maps of theatreland, but containing nothing about what I was meant to do for the rest of the

There are also, which came as a surprise to me, mid-year diaries. These run from July of this year to September of next year and are presumably aimed at people like me who have just lost their diaries, or at students who are about to start a new educational year. I suppose these have been here all the time and I just never noticed them, rather as I spotted for the first time the other day that there are road signs in the middle of Notting Hill promising to get you to Brighton, Guildford and Southamp-ton. You never notice what you don't need. Anyway, the mid-year diaries have totally up-to-date details of embassies and theatres, but they have none of my missing details. There is also available a Royal Year Book 1984, starting next January, which contains things like a photograph of Prince Andrew and must be very useful to people who suddenly forget what Prince Andrew looks like, and need to know in a hurry. If I had a dinner date with Prince Andrew i would certainly need it, but of course without a diary I simply can't remember whether we agreed to meet this year. And there were the other kinds of diary. real diaries with nothing but blank pages in which you write down what happened to you, how you got on at the electrical engineers' conference, the guide camp, the dinner with Prince Andrew etc. It's odd that the word "diary" has come to have two quite opposite meanings. In one kind you write down the past, in the other you write down the future, and in both cases it's wishful thinking.

In the last decade I have kept a diary for be quite traumatic for me. The other day I dared to look through it for the first time and was completely nonplussed to find that I had omitted all the traumas. It was a daily record of what I had done and what other people had done, but there was nothing at all about what I thought. I have now concluded that not only do I not trust other people with my inner feeling (which I suspected aiready) but I do not trust myself either, which comes as a slight shock. What do I know about myself that I dare not tell myself? And how shall I ever find out?

Well, in the words of a famous writer. "No Englishman ever put anything into an autobiography worth knowing about himself. It was Arthur Conan Doyle, actually, and it's a quotation I have never seen in an English reference book, only in a French dictionary of quotations, and merely placed there because it seemed like an anti-English remark.

You may have noticed a certain loose feeling about this piece, a certain disengagement from life. This is the result of losing my diary. The future has suddenly become free, empty and somewhat meaningless. All the road signs in my life have been removed and I am driving through an unmarked landscape. As I said, it's wonderful. It can't last, of course, but for a while time has become very elastic.

Paris couture is luxuriating in a success that has stunned even its creators. Sales have risen over the last year by a staggering 40 per cent. Among the major designer names sales are up by as much as 60 per cent and there is confident talk of a doubling of private clients by

The result in Paris last week was an almost indecent orgy of opulence - shimmering satin or luxurious deep pile velvets, encrustations of embroidery, lavish trimmings on so-called simple suits and furs like sable and ermine dripping from the model at Chanel as surely as we mortals in the audience dripped with sweat in temperatures of 120 degrees: With the money has come a

The only obstacle to completing this neighbourly relationship between former envoys is that there are only a handful of cottages in Combe, and none known to be available at present.

Jobs for premature graduates of the TV-am school of hard knocks being at a premium, I was invited vesterday to watch Angela Rippon start hers - as holiday relief for Michael Aspel on Capital Radio. As the welcoming strains of Angie Baby segued (jargon, not misprint) into the news, Rippon fidgeted with her headset and, redundantly in the circumstances, switched on her brightest tele-smile. From that point she might have been disc-jockeying all her life. When the technician called down to the airconditioning people to announce that "Miss Rippon would like to be cooler", I ··thought: "Impossible."

Samuel Pickwick, you may remembor, was author of Speculations of the Source of Hampstead Ponds, with Some Observations of the Theory of Tittlebats. The presence of "masses of freshwater mussels in Hamps continued, suggested that it was possible to have an unpolluted pond in the middle of a vast conurbation. My mollusc correspondent takes the gloomy view that if there are mussels in Hampstead they must be the sort that prefer gungy water. Tittlebats, by the way, are sticklebacks. I have not observed them in Hampstead lately.

KISSINGER: There is a difference between the situation when Nixon and Ford were in charge and the present time, but East-West relations still exist, and they amount to a real paradox. On the one side, we have to contain Soviet expansionism, and prevent Europe and other regions of the world from meeting the fate of the countries that fell into its orbit. On the other side. we have to prove to our allies that the United States is ready to find a peaceful solution for every conflict. It is not our fault if detente did not end the rivalry. Our pledge to prevent Soviet expansion remains unchanged, and one cannot emphasize it enough. It is true that the atmosphere has changed, but the basic problem remains unchanged. When you were Secretary of State, you said on a number of occasions that in order to contain the Soviet Union it was good to tie its hands with a series of accords or negotiations. Yet today, I have the impression that the underlying philosophy of United States foreign policy is not the same, not as regards "containment", but its will to reach an understanding with the Soviet Union each time such a thing is possible. At some moments, did you have the hope that with time and talking, the Soviet Union's foreign policy would stop being revolution-ary and become instead a big power diplomacy with legitimate, and not unlimited, ambitions? There is an oscillation between those improved through the show of good will, and those who think that they must be based on assertions of hostility. President Carter represented the first tendency and for two or three years President Reagan the second. Nixon has succeeded because he has never made a special effort to show himself charming or 100 intransigent. When we show ourselves too intractable, we are afterwards tempted to make too conciliatory gestures. The Soviet Union is not presently a normal state. I have been hoping that it would become one. I think that one must continue striving for that objective, on condition that the Western powers remain united and don't let themselves be divided. If with the Soviet Union. I would like to raise an objection to your relative optimism. The Soviet economy is inefficient. The population's living standard, far from rising, tends to decline. But on the other side, there are the figures about its military potential. They are impressive. The Soviet Union keeps increasing its military spending at an annual rate of 3.4 to 5 per cent, and this enormous power, both nuclear and conventional, surpasses by far its defence needs. I am not fully convinced by your alternative: explosion or return to normalcy.

I believe that there are several reasons for the build-up of the Soviet forces. The first is due to bureaucracy. Every decision requires the approval of the military in all conflicting issues. The military organization has its own command structure which is entirely independent from the Communist Party. It is the only one in that respect. As a result the military can much more easily find additional resources than in any democratic state. Second, the military are virtually the only ones to be partially efficient. But if they keep arming at the present rate and if the West does not follow, they may one day translate their military force into a political advantage. Sooner or later, if the industrial democracies do not react, the Soviet Union will try to impose neutralism on its neighbours to make them relatively powerless.

in an historical perspective, I don't think the Soviet Union can compete with the West, especially if the latter shows its determination. I do not say that the Soviet Union will necessarily change. It will not change unless one opposes it with an enormous force and conviction, and this must be made clear to it.

The Europeans feel rightly or wrongly that the decisive military power today is the Soviet Union rather than the United States. At the same time, the United States is making a considerable rearmament effort, which creates ambiguous and almost contradictory feelings in Europe. One favours American rearmament but one hesitates when it comes to US suggestions or projects, such as the deployment of Pershing and cruise missiles in

I approve the American rearmament programme. It concerns the security not only of the United States, but of all free peoples. As to the decisions concerning the armaments proper - are they the best possible ones? I have said in the United States aiready that a bipartisan commission of competent citizens should be in charge of it to put an end to the debate. Indeed, each time there is the question of new weapons, it is necessary to make inquiry upon inquiry, to discuss it again and again. The armchair strategists give their advice. Yet the decisions made by President Reagan concern above all those who wish to safeguard their understand them.

the United States and prevent the Soviet Union from believing the opposite. The one and the other are inseparable.
The Europeans must understand that the Soviet proposals have a single objective: maintaining their nuclear force pointed at Europe, and preventing America from coming to help Europe. If the Soviets achieve their objective and if Europe gets weaker the Soviet Union acquire veto power over the deployment of arms in Europe. This is a crucial question. Technically and intellectually, the control of medium-range weapons is a simple problem. Many Europeans took fright at hearing people say they preferred to have no defence rather than to run the risk of a war. These Europeans should look at Cambodia Vietnam Poland or Afghanistan and ask themselves whether the absence of defence saves human

This is the first time in history when one is trying to exchange what the other possesses against what we will possess one day. The negotiations have been started only to appease public opinion. At their starting point, these negotiations were an absurdity. One tried to convince the Soviets to reduce or suppress their SS20s by telling them, that at the end of 1983, one would possibly deploy the Pershings. The Pershings do not yet exist. The SS20s do exist. We also run the risk, which is what the Soviets hope for, that our public opinion will refuse this deployment of the Pershings. Politically, it is more a problem of negotiations between Western and Regotiations between Western governments and their public opinion than nego-tiations between the West and the Soviets. When the Soviet Union had 75 of the SS20s and we had none, the Soviets said: there is a balance of power and everything is all right. When they had 110 of them, they said: military balance. Now, they have 353 of them, the more of the missiles they have, the more they say there is a balance of power which they will not let be upset. Andropov has just repeated that the Soviet Union will never allow any change in the existing military situation. This is a highly dangerous doctrine. It means the Soviet Union will never tolerate losing its advantage. And this is a serious warning which should prompt us never to let them gain an advantage. Negotiations will not succeed without a Pershing deployment.

The battle is no longer a strategic or military one. It is political or moral. Will one convince European public opinion that this for our own security but also for a possible negotiation with the Soviets? No negotiation will be Europe. Very often, the problem of missiles is being presented as a means whereby the United States will disensage itself from Europe. means whereby the United States second moral and psychological will disengage itself from Europe. battle will end with a European victory. These weapons are militarily nsefulness they raise the question of the Europeans' will to resist. I see no agreement in sight between the Palestinians and the Israelis The situation seems to me to be both hopeless and not explosive. The European chanceries have believed for years that the solution consisted of creating a Palestinian entity on the West Bank. But the Israelis are hostile to such a state. Whoever knows the area knows that Israel's frontiers in 1967 stood one and a half kilometres from the King David Hotel is Jerusalem. The West Bank and Israel are so closely intertwined and interrelated that a Palestinian entity on the West Bank is inconceivable unless it came out in forces of precent with the Lewish favour of peace with the Jewish state. In the immediate future, the Israells thus do not accept a Palestinian entity and the Arab states refuse to recognize Israel. This is why I have been saying for years; there is no solution presently to what is being called the Israeli problem. Israel exists, militarily. It represents the area's strongest state. There may one day be a reconcili-ation with the Palestinians. Today, it is difficult to go beyond the Camp David agreements, beyond peace between Egypt and Israel, this peace of which Kissinger had laid the foundations and which was coucled the Provident Courts But I don't ed by President Carter. But I don't think the Israeli-Palestinian problem is likely to be solved by any of the current projects, including the one of President Reagan.

There are two problems in the Middle East. Raymond Aron recalled the first one. There is also the problem of the Gulf, of Iran and Iraq. In a certain way, these two questions are related. Last year, in September, I briefly thought that progress was possible on the West Bank of the Jordan. I have never been in favour of the creation of a Palestinian entity on the West Bank. Why should one raise uncertainties and insecurity in Jordan and in Israel? But I believe that the return of a substantial part of the Arab population to the West Bank would constitute progress.

This situation is not desirable, but it is not explosive. What worries me much more is the Gulf region. I fear the discussions of Opec on the price of oil is not inspired only by economic arguments, but that it has a political dimension and is part of Iran's drive to destabilize the moderate governments of The Gulf. The war between Iran and Iraq strengthens this point of view. If Iraq is defeated, a period of trouble, of uncertainty and crisis will follow in The Gulf. It is thus necessary to take into account at the same time the Israeli-Palestinian question, which is so difficult to solve, but which we can contain, and the Gulf question. The Western countries will have to ask sooner or later; how to maintain the existing institutions in the face of internal trouble or foreign

Pros and conned on the campus

In the current issue of The Free In the current issue of The Free Nation the redeviatable Cox and Marks draw attention to an interesting abuse of public funds. Student unions are funded directly by local authorities, who are obliged to pay the subscription for every student, as a mandatory part of his educational grant. This tax is justified in the following terms. If it were not levied, the local students' union could not crist. If the union did not could not exist. If the union did not exist, then all those "extra-curricu-lar" activities which are so important to the formation of a student's character - sport, theatre, debating clubs and social gatherings - could not be organized. Hence the tax is a legitimate addition to the student's fee, which covers part of the cost of Cox and Marks have studied the students' union at North London Polytechnic. They have discovered that, out of an annual budget for 1982-3 of £180,000, the amount spent in supporting non-political activities of the kind I have mentioned was just £20,000 - that is, no more than 11 per cent of the total. Of the remainder, almost half was spent on maintaining six "sabbatical officers" of the union, together with their administrative staff. These "officers" are students, paid to take a year away from their studies in order to devote them-selves to the work of the union. The remaining accountable portion of the budget was spent on essentially political activities, including the subsidization of a left-wing students' magazine. Finally, it was discovered, £19,000 of the budget could not be accounted for at all.

The existence of the "sabbatical officers" provides a valuable opportunity to political activists, and, as Cox and Marks show, the opportunity is taken. Sit-ins and protests form a large part of the union agenda, and its publications and announcements lend themselves monotonously to the posturings of the radical left.

The student union is nominally a democratic organization. But for all practical purposes its decisions are controlled by the professionals, who have time enough to sit through meetings, to delay and filibuster, and to indulge in the familiar tactics whereby Leninists undermine the workings of the "bourgeois democracy" which they so despise. Last year's president of the North London Polytechnic Union, a Communist Party supporter, was already in his fourth sabbatical year as an officer of the students' union and yet still able to claim the title of "student" on the sole ground that he had once begun a course of study. With such professionals in power, what likelihood is there that the

In his book Sabres and Brown shirts, documenting the Nazis' rise to power, Michael Steinberg de-scribed similar techniques. The most important move in manipulating German student opinion was the appointment of full time activists. recruited from the student body, and psid from party funds on condition that they gave their time completely to Nazi agitation. These activists sought control of the student fraternities, and were able to elicit vociferous support at every crucial juncture. This was an important part of the Nazi campaign to persuade the electorate that National Socialism was the natural creed of youth.

The Nazis were surely right. If there is to be serious political organization on the campus, it must organization on the campus, it must be undertaken by professionals. The position of "sabbatical officer" provides a point of control which may be used to override the innocence of student politics and to abolish the open debate and social rivalry which are natural to adolescent opinion, so generating an appearance of active unity. It is thereby possible to impose the "control from above" which is the first move in the technique which Lenin called democratic centralism and which Hitler called Gleichschaltung: the technique of destroying

The existence of these professionals may therefore conflict with the principle of a students' mion exists to encourage the coluntary associations through which students complete their formal education, It exists not to command but to obey, and to obey first of all the spontaneous wishes of the student

A good illustration of the attitude of the student unions is provided by the history of Campus, a satirical magazine launched by students at Aberdeen University in 1978 and intended to poke fun at the tedious leftism of the "official" student paper. It received no funds from the students' union, but - unlike the paper funded by the union - it was at once able to support itself. Since March this year, it has been published nationally, and campaigns vigorously against the politicization of the students' union and against the rule requiring compulsory union

Already the student unions in half a dozen universities have tried to ban the magazine; all those who have advertised in Campus have received letters demanding that they boycott its pages. Let us hope that the student unions will not be allowed to crush this enterprise, and that Campus will succeed in its campaign to make membership of the union voluntary. Those wishing to support the venture should write to Campus Publications, BCM Campus, London WC1N 3XX addictive drugs: they continue to exert great influence long after the pleasure they give has passed. Many lobbies remain powerful persuaders of political minds even though they no longer serve either the national interest or the interest of those they were founded to promote. Until recently, most politicians thought that the trade union lobby was so powerful it could never be ignored by government although its influence was often malign. Mrs Thatcher changed all that. The beer and sandwiches ceremony at No 10 disappeared from our screens. Many politicians, of all colours, felt like new men.

The farming lobby has great influence. Is its influence benign? If not, will it, too, now be challenged? For most country dwellers, there will be no thanksgiving this harvest. They have been getting stuck during the winter in snowdrifts because farmers have removed hedges. They have been deafened by bird-scarers and drying engines. Their gardens have sometimes been destroyed by chemicals. The poppies, the corn-flowers, the manigolds, the orchids that used to delight their eyes have declined or disappeared, as have the owls and the falcons, the partridges and hares. The small mammals have been replaced by huge machines and the small fields by vast prairies. Houses are filled with small black smuts from stubble burning. Glori-

To CAP it all (pun intended), we are paying our farmers huge subsidies to produce food at far greater cost than need be. Such subsidies, apart from increasing farmers' personal incomes so they can buy new tractors (most of them manufactured abroad), new com-bine harvesters (all of them manufactured abroad), bigger sprayers and wider fertilizer drills, encourage vast over-production. Parts of these sold at ridiculously low prices to non-EEC countries such as Russia, who spend their money on other things, like guns and missiles pointed at us.

Making a relationship with nature is as essential to our spiritual wellbeing as economic relationships are to our material existence. A wilderness is a vital source of spiritual refreshment. A wilderness is not a desert, it is a place that is uncultivated and inhabited by wild

In Britain, apart from the Highlands and wilder hills, certain coastlines, moorland and some marshes, the countryside has its own small, local wildernesses. A pond is a kind of wilderness, so is a hedge, a self-sown copse, a roadside verge and a headland. That is why people flock to the country at weekends and for holidays. They make their peace with nature in these wildernesses. But the farmer is destroying them at an alarming rate, encouraged by government subsidy. Soon, the British landscape and its wildlife will live only in the nature films stored in television company archives.

If these criticisms seem soft, here are some hard ones. Last year, farmers' incomes rose by 45 per cent. The year before farmers' incomes rose by 24 per cent.

Last year farmers received subsidies amounting to £1,333 billion, at least, of which £333m came from the UK Exchequez, Farmers also enjoyed considerable tax advantages and farm land is not rated.

Farmers do produce more grain per man each year but they produce far less income per pound of capital employed than most other business-es. When the value of land is taken into account and a proper charge made for it, say 12 per cent (the current average yield on long-dated gilts), the true return on capital is negative. Only the very rich can seriously contemplate buying land to How powerful is the farming lobby? Consider these figures. The National Trust for England has 1,140,000 members, the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds has nearly 500,000 and there are many other smaller conservationist groups and bodies, including the Council for the Preservation of Rural England and the Rambiers Association. At least three million Association. At least three million people are anglers and innumerable others spend time in the countryside for recreation. Against these, the National Farmers Union has fewer than 140,000 members, and the total number engaged in farming is 633,000.

The farming lobby has managed to blur the vision of most politicians for many years. Its influence is a habit they should now try to kick.

There is now serious official debate in the prison department about reform of the dispersal system. It coincides with concern among Conservative MPs after the vote against restoration of hanging that regimes for long-term prisoners should be

The concern centres on the future of seven prisons in the dispersal system: Albany and Parkhurst, also on the Isle of Wight; Wormwood Scrubs; Gartree (in Leicestershire); Long Lartin (Worcestershire) and Wakefield (Yorkshire). Together they hold about 2,400 prisoners. A new prison, Frankland (Durham), is due to take its first top security prisoners in November. prisoners in November.

It is now widely accepted that the dispersal system does not work. It came into being in somewhat dubious circumstances as an alternative to a scheme put forward by Lord Mountbatten in the mid-1960s to house all top security inmates in a prison specially built for the purpose on the Isle of Wight. Lord Mountbatten produced his recommendations for the government after the escape of George Blake, the spy. The way his plan was torpedoed has rankled in the service ever since and does much to explain disquiet by prison officers over the dangers to which they believe the present system exposes them.

Last year a report on Gartree by the Chief Inspector of Prisons said staff there were so worried about the recurrence of riots that they were undermining the prison's role. To exercise strict control over the top security prisoners held there, officers were locking them up for 14 hours a day. There was a serious riot in 1972; another in 1978

The blame for much of the unrest is being put on recommendations by a sub-committee of the Advisory Council on the Penal System which Council on the Penal System which was invited by Mr James Callaghan, then Home Secretary, to have a second look at the problem of high-risk prisoners after Lord Mountbatten drew up his scheme.

A key figure on the sub-com-nittee was Mr Leo Abse, the Labour MP and penal reformer. Mr Jonathan Uzzell, who is in the governor grade and No 3 at Wormwood Scrubs, now accuses Mr Abse of "deceit and manipulation". He quotes Mr Abse's autobiography, Private Member (Mac-donald), as telling how he plotted to achieve the dispersal of Category A (top security) prisoners into liberal prisons rather than concentrating them into "an oppressive fortress as proposed by Lord Mountbatten. Mr Abse wrote how he decided to embark upon diversionary tactics: "to shift attention from the real issue of dispersal or concentration to another issue which would arouse the hostility of all the liberals and place one on the side of the devils. It would provoke great controversy. and, by riveting attention upon an irrelevancy, enable our sabotage of the main Mountbatten proposal to go unnoticed smid the clamour. I put to my committee colleagues that perimeter security should be reinforced by the use of guns."

to each, according to a prison department source.
Governors and other senior officials who met in June to discuss the dispersal system came up with two main ideas for reform. One is that prisoners should come only which characterize present dispersal prisons: they should earn their passage there by good behaviour in stricter prisons first.

The other idea concerns aggressive, unpredictable prisoners who are ive, unpredictable prisoners who are liable to explode into violence without warning. No more than 20 should be held in a wing, it is felt.

Governors and officers recognize that they and long-term prisoners have to coexist, and tightening up regimes too much would increase tension rather than reduce it, thus making prisons even more danger

But too many prisoners now have too much freedom to exert their disruptive power inside the dispersal

Now, we are assured, rates are a permanent fixture of the fiscal landscape. Non-domestic property is to be revalued; the rates white paper drops a broad hint that revaluation of domestic property is to follow. For the modicum of justice among ratepayers that would achieve, thanks are due.

Not only is there no consensus on an alternative to the rates; the Government finds the proceeds of commercial and industrial rates too lucrative to permit tampering with them beyond some small scale (and welcome) changes on the timing of rates bills and empty factories. It is admitted that the string of complex me s introduced since 1979 to disburse grants have failed in their central purpose - to give the government control of current council spending, but the white paper has a scapegoat: the sixteen, or is it a dozen, or is it twenty Labour city authorities which during 1983-84 account for the bulk of the "overspend."

levels of spending despite falling cils is enough.

To be sure, it is difficult to feel much sympathy for the councillors of Islington, Southwark or Lambeth; sympathy instead for their long-suffering (and still remarkably: quiescent) rate-payers. But the problems of London local government are all to do with the access by extremist Labour councils to the munificence of the commercial rate, the reform of which has now been abandoned. Eight of the other likely scapegoats are shortly to be abolished.

The white paper invites doubt practical, political and principled. Despite the width of the powers Mr Jenkin is to be. awarded he may yet have difficulty in singling out his small number of offenders; much depends on whether future years' spending shows the same kind of bunching among Labour authorities, which despite Central Office are not all part of a giant socialist conspiracy. The government is promising in effect that within two years there will be little or no divergence between council budgets and its overall The white paper has a missing financial plan: delivering hun-disruption. Worse - and here is anxiety for every genuine parliamentarian - in a year or so's time Mr Jenkin will be asking MPs to pore over council budgets. If MPs' performance both individual and in committee in controlling the outlays of central government were impeccable there would be grounds for hoping their examination of local budgets could be useful. As it is, Mr Jenkin could clog the Parliamentary timetable without getting much sense on local spending.

Is central government fit to undertake the detailed scrutiny of council spending in an era when even a government committed to the reduction of public outlays finds it difficult enough to keep a watchful eye on its own programmes? Trailing the details of Lambeth council's finances through the House of Commmons is one thing; but how many civil service hours are to be spent both before and after in horse trading and letter-writing?

Government is over-loaded and Mr Jenkin's "selective scheme" for controlling the rates of a few councils will make one department list even further. The possibility envisaged in the white paper of the Department of the Environment's taking responsibility for the rates of more than 400 councils through the "reserve powers" ought to terrify anyone concerned not only with government's size but also its competence.

Nor is the scale of Soviet involvement known. The number of Soviet advisers is certainly much smaller than the number of Cubans; but Cubans, East Germans, Bulgarians and other allies of the USSR do not play an independent role. They are in Central America with Moscow's approval, and military support for the Nicaraguan regime and for leftist guerrillas in El Salvador will continue even after the signing of agreements unless verification can be ensured.

A peaceful Central America would look to the United States. not the USSR, for economic aid and development. Even now the USA is selling the Soviet Union surplus grain, making possible Moscow's shipments to Nicaragua. An end to conflict would greatly reduce Soviet influence. Significantly, in reporting events in Central America, two Moscow publications used the same photograph with very contradictory captions. Novoc Vremya said it showed "US-armed Nicaraguan counter-revolutionaries" while Krasnaya Zvezda claimed they were "Nicaraguan border guards". For Moscow establishing the facts about the conflict in order to negotiate peace is less important than exploiting the genuine grievances of the inhabitants to spread revolution, provide problems for Washington. and distract world attention from Afghanistan and Poland.

President Reagan's strategy in Central America is subjected to constant scrutiny and criticism both in Congress and in the media. This is one of the vital strengths of democracy, but it can seem a weakness to those who have no respect for democratic rights in their own countries. It is not enough to support anti-Marxist forces; the USA must be seen to be backing those who offer an improvement on preceding regimes. The difficult balance which the Reagan Administration is trying to maintain between the demonstration of military strength and willingness to negotiate deserves more but political development sympathetic assessment both in the United States and in Western Europe.

It could be This is not because he is the candidate of the left who is likely to take Labour in a direction which will lead to further disintegration and probably another electoral defeat. Nor is it simply that Mr Kinnock lacks the calibre, political maturity and intellect of Mr Peter Shore whose qualities have earned him a defeat as assured as Mr Kinnock's victory.

What is essentially wrong is that Mr Kinnock is enjoying the assurance of victory that is only possible for the beneficiary of an undemocratic and thoroughly bad system of election. Mr Kinnock knows he will win because victory is guaranteed by the caucus votes of the unions and of the constituency parties. There is little possibility of surprise, no serious chance that the outcome can be affected by the course of the candidates' arguments or the evolving ideas of the electors in response to what the candidates say. The reason is that a very few have the power to commit the votes of millions without the least regard per cent each. to the opinions of those they purport to represent.

To those who do not want to weaken the parliamentary tradition by which the Prime Minister should always, and only, be someone able to command a majority in the House of Commons, this is not an appealing argument. Even so, a genuinely wider party electorate is an honourable concept and one which is commonly accepted outside Britain. It is also practised here by both the Liberals and the Social Democrats.

But the Labour system of election is inspired by the conviction that party democracy consists in the opinions and wishes of those who control the party machine, which is something that the left is confident of its ability to do. Labour's method is the choice of a leader by an electoral arrangement in which the unions have 40 per cent of the voting strength and the Parliamentary Labour Party and the constituency parties 30

If the unions balloted their

for both sides

Sir, Commenting on an answer given by my predecessor as Minister of State to a question in Parliament. Sir David Napley (July 20) says it is not correct that the results of examinations of specimens carried out by Home Office forensic scientists are made available to both sides in a criminal case.

The basic Home Office circular to the police states that "the recognized principle is that the results of any examination by a forensic science laboratory should be made available to the desence where such results may have any bearing on the case". There are established procedures for giving effect to this principle.

If a case is to be tried summarily, or there is to be a committed hearing before justices, then the results of any examination which the prosecution proposes to use in evidence should be supplied to the defence before they are tendered in court. Otherwise, they are given to the defence following committal. The principle also applies to material which is not going to be used by the prosecution, but which may have some bearing on the case.

The Attorney General last year issued guidelines requiring the disclosure of such material in cases to be tried on indictment. The Director of Public Prosecutions ensures compliance with these procedures where he undertakes the prosecution; and I have no ground for supposing that they are not being followed in other cases.

Sir David Napley goes on to say that if a laboratory has expressed an opinion on specimens submitted by the police none of its experts is permitted to assist the defence. This s not so. If the defence require additional examinations by the original expert (including examinations of additional specimens), or further points to be taken into consideration, there is no bar on this. Neither is there any objection to the submission of items to another Home Office scientist working in a different field of expertise. Should the defence decide to employ the services of an outside forensic expert then the facilities of the Home Office laboratory are available to him.

If a specimen has been examined by one Home Office scientist it is not the practice to sllow this specimen to be submitted to another Home Office scientist working in the same discipline. This seems entirely reasonable. Yours faithfully

DOUGLAS HURD, Home Office, Queen Anne's Gate, SW1.

Eritrean incident

From Brigadier Charles Cox

Sir, As the commanding officer of the last British Army battalion in Eritrea before the evacuation in 1952, in accordance with the United Nations mandate, I must protest more strongly against the damaging statement by Ian Robinson, in your issue of July 25, that "peasants were dispossessed by the British in 1951". Apart from action against Shifta

Relatively speaking

From Mr T. R. Burch

Sir, Let's stop being prissy about this (Philip Howard, July 19). The reason why the accusative "whom" is used in the question, "But whom say ye that I am?" (Matthew xvi 15) is that it is an exact translation of the Latin version, Quem me esse dicitis?, where quem is accusative because the construction is the one which every schoolboy used to know as the accusative and infinitive, the Latin way of expressing an indirect siatement.

In English it's just wrong, even if t does appear in the Authorised Version. The Latin, of course, is an exact translation of the original Greek, where the same construction is used.

Yours relatively, T. R. BURCH, Burgh Heath, Surrey. July 26.

The fourth paragraph of Mr Ian S. P. Barker's letter yesterday should have ended:

"Is it possible that the law would stand for the refusal by parents, perhaps on religious grounds, to allow a blood transfusion to a child that might otherwise die?"

Criminal evidence US change of course on Cuba proposed

From Professor J. R. Pole

Sir, President Reagan is seeking From the Minister of State, Home advice about Central America. It is sign of the difficulties facing the United States that the deep dissension which afflicted the nation over Vicinam can already be observed well in advance of any such involvement in the present struggle. But that involvement has already begun. And it has begun because there are so many levels of business, politics and strategy at which it has already existed for generations.

Close engagement sometimes makes accurate observation more difficult. The suggestion I want to offer is not out of keeping with the precedents, if not the traditions, of American politics, though it is unlikely to occur spontaneously to the Reagan Administration.

The suggestion is a complete change of course towards Cuba. The damaging economic difficulties experienced by the Cuban people in their daily lives are formidable proof of the power of the American Put the bouncett and the boycott, But the boycott, and the sustained enmity of the United States, also help to fuel the fervour with which Castro strives to export the Cuban revolution (a revolution which once had many American sympathisers).

I venture to suggest that the most effective means of taking the fuel out of that movement would be to make peace with Castro's Cuba, establish normal diplomatic and commercial links, and to restore the tourist traffic and the artistic and intellectual connexions which have historically existed between the two countries.

At present the United States, which committed itself to non-intervention as its contribution to ending the missile crisis in 1962, can do nothing more to exert pressure than it has done and is doing. A friendly Cuba might have to wait for another generation. But once a start was made, the two peoples would take a great deal of the initiative towards reconciliation into their own hands.

Detained in Angola

From Mr David Ginsburg

British detainees currently in prison in Angola? One of these, Colin Evans, was a constituent of mine for the whole of my 23 years in Parliament. He and his companions were sentenced in 1976 to between 16 and 30 years' imprisonment, and they still have between nine and 23 years to serve.

their comviction as mercenaries the fact remains that if there is no commutation of their sentences some of them may never see their parents and homes again.

United States prisoners in a similar situation have been exchanged and have left Angola. When Senor Jorge, the Angolan Minister of Foreign Affairs, visited Britain this February he expressed the hope. both in public and privately, that his President would exercise clemency in the course of this year. Though the year still has some months to run there are no signs of any significant movement.

It is easy to criticize the Foreign Office in matters of this kind: still, it would not be unfair to suggest that I irresoluteness in their approach over the years. Are they unwilling to stake out their position for fear of offending the Angolans?

If we were really making progress towards an early release this might not matter, but unhappily I see no such signs. Even the improvement in the atmosphere over Namibia has not inspired a major change in the Musical manners

From Professor William Mathias Sir, With all due respect to Mr Gerald Harvey's persistence as a listener (July 25) he is unjust to Mr Robert Ponsonby (July 12) and the BBC's Music Department. Above all, he fails to recognize that we now find ourselves in a pluralistic musical age which allows even requires - living composers of serious intent to write in a wide variety of styles and manners with equal validity. If Mr Harvey dislikes the music of Boulez and Messiaen (however much one wishes that he might persist rather more at least with the latter) he is entirely at liberty to tune in to other living composers whose work is perhaps more to his taste - not a few of them British.

The real and important question which needs to be asked is whether or not the BBC's overall pattern of broadcasting truthfully recognizes and reflects the historically unique musical multiplicity of our time. Despite the fact that it is difficult to achieve this, it must surely be recognized by regular listeners that clear efforts are now being made to do so - Mr Ponsonby, indeed, refers to the present situation as being "admirably diverse". Mr Harvey's attitude, in contrast, reflects a severely restricted view of

Church authority

From the Reverend M. T. Elvins Sir, As one interested in the practical implications of Christian unity I thought Richard Harries in his article, "The recovery of authority" (July 23), oversimplified the question of authority, even as understood by John Keble and his friends in the Oxford Movement, who adapted Catholic moral teaching from the current handbooks. The crucial area of moral authority has yet to be tackled by the Anglican/Roman Catholic International Commission (ARCIC). This is unfortunate as the standard of moral life is central to the teaching of Vatican II (Dignitatis Humanae and Gaudium et Spes).

that a basis would exist on which further improvements could be gradually negotiated, the consequences of which would make themselves felt in Central America. I believe that by improving its base in the Gulf the United States could at least extend its range of policy solve themselves. But I do suggest

It would actually be much easier, precisely because no formal re-lations exist with Cuba, to bring about this effect in relation to Cuba than to the countries of Central America, where ramifying connexions already exist and where long-term changes might have to be brought about rather more slowly. But the Cuban situation considered ideologically not dissimilar case of Dr Kissinger, who engineered the American volte face over China, now has the advantageous opportunity of learning from his own achievements. At least the example of China has the advantage of demonstrating that the issues at stake are ones of strategy rather than ideological principle.

I suspect that Europeans have a tendency to underestimate the seriousness for the United States of the disorders of its neighbours to the south. The Americans do not need material assistance from us of the sort we have received from them, but they do need steady nerves and clear thinking. This, I submit, is the advice that our Government should be pressing on them, rather than offering the Administration unilateral (if only moral) support.

This vigorous course of action might attract Sir Geoffrey Whatever rights and wrongs of Alternatively the possibility of an exchange, or "swop", should exercise HM Government. Some Foreign Office officials, as I noted in my many talks with ministers, may find the use of the word "swop" distasteful, but the fact is that countries do engage in "swops" and Britain has been no exception. If a "swop" is not acceptable, economic aid in exchange for prisoners is a course which a country in Angola's situation could welcome. Angola might reflect that the cost of keeping seven detainees in prison for many years must be a heavy financial burden on their own people. They would be better off with more aid from us and no prisoners to maintain.

This unhappy story must not be allowed to drag on for years. The prisoners have been punished enough and it is high time for HM Government and Parliament to send a plain message to Angola. Yours faithfully.

Salmon in danger

From Lieutenant-Colonel Sir George Kennard Sir, The efforts of several organiza tions and letters to the press to preserve our Atlantic salmon, and the many interests involved, have achieved very little. Yet their salvation requires but a decision from the Ministry of Agriculture to ban drift and river netting, a decision which never comes overall.

The autumn runs of grilse are not in danger. Since, unlike the salmon, their travels in the sea are as yet uncertain, they might be regarded as a different species, and be subjected still to all assaults by man. Yours hopefully, gap has appeared on moral questions such as the hitherto uninterrupted tradition on birth control, abortion and now the question of divorce. In each of these areas the state was the first to adapt to changing

Slave ownership in London

I am far from suggesting that all the problems would then simply From Mrs O. C. Paynton Sir. Colonel Patrick Montgomery (July 30) raises a difficult problem which does exist in this country and one which requires considerable care in handling if conditions for the

As it was her third charge and the items in each case were similar. enquiries were made which revealed that the woman was an orphan who at the age of 14 had been, "as is customary in her country", given by the king to her employer's family and had worked for that family ever

Her working hours and conditions seemed excessive by our standards. She had been brought to England by her employer when he was posted here as a diplomat, She received no pay, but her employer stated that she was treated as "a member of the family" and received a present at Ramadan - a sum of between £25

Reporting such a case could have made conditions far worse for her. Without her "family" here she would have been lost, and had she been sent back by her employer, or deported, her plight as a "disgraced slave" could have been very difficult, especially as in her country there are severe penalties for theft, including the amputation of hands.

Perhaps help should be given carlier and the Vienna Convention on Diplomatic Relations, article 1, should be strengthened to ensure that the pay and conditions of all their stall, including domestic, are no less favourable than for similar work in the host country. Laker litigation

August 1.

From Mr Peter V. Ind Sir. The true function of a court in any land is to establish justice. For a court to overrule, or attempt to overrule, the power of a foreign court to establish justice in its own land is a serious breach of democracy on the international level. Surely the crucial factor is to determine whether or not conspiracy by airlines and others against Laker actually occurred. The action of the Court of Appeal (Law Report, July 27) can only raise suspicions of a

Historically, the British legal system has become an example of justice at its best, but there has been for some years a growing cynicism regarding our court procedure and justice. Surely the most diplomatic and in the long run the wisest action would have been to allow the American judiciary to establish

During the last 25 years we have experienced, throughout the Western world particularly, a great erosion of freedom caused by erosion of freedom caused by terrorism. To succumb to expedi-ency in judicial matters can only further crode what faith remains in democratic processes. Yours faithfully,

From the Chairman of Liverpool City Council,

From the British Ambassador to Poland

Sir, Last night I gave a dinner party here in honour of Lady Ryder of Warsaw. The attendance of so many representatives of the Polish Government and private individuals was a testimony to the immense achievements of the work of the Sue Ryder Foundation in this country.
As it happened after dinner I read

Mr Lewis Massey's letter (July 26) giving his account of the intrepid way in which he secured the Buenos Aires cup and other items of the Beresford Hope silver in 1946 for the Embassy in Warsaw.

I should like him to know that all the pieces he mentioned were prominently displayed during the dinner and generated a great deal of conversation about this very special episode and the long-term nature of Anglo-Polish relations. I hope that Mr Massey and your other correspondents will be in no doubt that these beautiful objects are greatly cherished here and put to precisely the purpose for which the Beresford Hope bequest was intended.

opportunity for which he had always hoped, of service in China. He went as 1st secretary first to Nanking and then to Peking where he stayed for seven years, being promoted Counsellor that year, He established a notable position for himself in China.

His love for its culture and civilization gained for him a number of influential Chinese friends, and it is quite certain that nobody but he would have been allowed to take out of the country, when he left in 1957, the wonderful collection of Ming porcelain which he acquired there and is now in the British Museum

After a spell of three years in the Foreign Office he went as Ambassador to Laos and was there until 1962 when he was appointed to the Harvard Centre for International Affairs.

He had hoped that this would ive him an opportunity for fruitful discussions with Americans on the Far East, a subject what there was to do be on which he could speak with authority and first-hand know-for visits of Chinese to Great ledge. government stocks were depressed, while gold sank by $13

The British Government is in a particularly difficult position. Although the pound is weak against the dollar it is uncomfortably strong, from industry's point of view, against Continental currencies, buoyed by its petrocurrency status. A rise in interest rates would lead to a further unwelcoming strengthening against European currencies and would increase industry's borrowing costs, discouraging stockbuilding and investment at a time when the recovery remains patchy and

A cut in rates, on the other hand, would alarm the financial markets, which are already worried about above target monetary growth, and could precipitate a steep fall in sterling which wold undermine the Government's hopes of keeping inflation low.

The insurance industry is the second biggest invisible earner in the City. Its net earnings of resent 27 per cent of the total, were up by 20 per cent from 1981, almost entirely due to higher income from investments abroad. This was also the main reason for a near trebling of the net earnings of pension funds, from £107m in 1981 to £287m

The Committee on Invisible Exports recently forecast increases in net earnings of around 10 per cent in the main service industries, including a 7 per cent increase for banking, 5 per cent for insurance, 10 to 15 per cent for the Stock Exchange and 15 to 20 per cent for

It says that profits this year will be not less than £3m and that the dividend will total 15p. Both figures represent record payouts, the like of which have not been seen since 1979.

That was the last year when profits were measured in millions and the dividend double figures. Since, Wadding-ton had had two big trading setbacks and to some minds has demonstrated that in a small company the jobs of chairman and managing director should be held by separate people.

Its attraction now for BPCC is that the problems appear to be over. Mr Maxwell has plans to revitalize the games division while bringing in a stationery he says is complementary.

memories are short - which is probably just as well because if Forward they were not, nothing would be done - and there are distinct signs that enthusiasm for Antipodean gold mines mounting again. The most important reason for gold mines, big and small, coming back into favour is a good one. Australian mines have always suffered from relatively high production costs, and they became uneconomic in the mid-1970s. But that changed when the gold price soared in 1979 and 1980.

The price of the metal is now about half the $850 ounce it touched three years ago, but production costs of perhaps $260 a ounce still allow a reasonable margin. The last few years have witnessed extensive exploration, especially in the traditional gold mining areas of Western Australia and Victoria. Output has risen from a low point of 15.4 tonnes in 1976 to 4 tonnes last year.

Much of this exploration effort is on the verge of giving birth to mines proper. It is an instructive and important difference from earlier mining activity that most of the active companies really do have holes in the ground or reasonable prospects of finding them.

Occidental's Black Hills discovery, Pancontinental at Paddington, and ACM at Big and Little Bell come to mind, Central Perth, West Coast, and Devex might tempt those who like their Australian shares priced in the traditional cents.

All subsidiaries of the heavily prined Forward Technology Industries are now back to profit. However, the mountain of debt relating to the discontinued businesses, accounting for about half of the £520.000 interest charge, still weighs heavily on the profitability for the first half of 1983.

However, borrowings have been whittled down by about £1m from the year end level to £7.5m and the market celebrated the return to pretax profits with a 5p rise to 34p. Unrelievable overseas taxes leading to a tax charge of £150,000 for the six months meant continued losses, of £39,000, at the attributable level rising to a loss of £176.000 after extraordinary losses relating to final costs of the rationalization

Marketing and Advertising: Torin Douglas asks why a potential target is being missed

The marketing world has an obsession about youth. Of all the demographic pigeon-holes like to divide us - ABs, housewives, businessmen and so on - the most common "target group" factor is "young". The definition of young may alter from market to market - it may be 16 to 19year-olds, it may be 18 to 34year-olds - but youth is the qualification that appears in most marketing strategy docu-ments rather than middle-age or

Newspapers and magazines are constantly searching for younger readers, since these are the people advertisers want to reach. Channel Four is delighted that its audience is far younger than that of ITV since this will be an asset in attracting advertising revenue. Even manufacturers of products which are purchased throughout one's life, and not simply by the young aim their marketing campaigns firmly at young people.

This makes sense: many brand decisions are made early in life and rarely changed. For instance, most people never switch bank accounts. Consequently the big four banks devote increasing effort to catch account-holders while they are

Ignored generation loses out to the oldest obsession

QUESTIONS are starting to be asked about the advertising man's dictum that young people have money to spend and older people have none. A series of conferences has been held on the subject this year, the last called by Age Concern in London last week when 300 businessmen and members of the organization discussed "Older People in the Consumer Market Place". This article joins in the discussion.

young. Cash savings incentives

If new customers are coming into the market, a company has a far better chance of winning them to its products than it has of persuading existing users to witch brands. In addition, young people are often thought to have a good deal of disposable income, either because, as children, they receive substantial pocket money or, once they start working, because they have no major financial commitments such as mortgages, or because when newly married they may have two salaries but no children. They are also more likely to be receptive to new ideas.

However, there is a growing realization among many marketing people that this concen-tration on youth has gone too far and that it is short-sighted to aim products so firmly at young people when the middle-aged have so much disposable

Older people have more money to spend than has been generally assumed. Yet only financial advertisers seem to have grasped this. Older people save and invest more.

There are 18 million people in Britain over the age of 50, of whom almost 9 million are more than 65°, Mr Harold Lind, an economic cunsultant

One reason, says Mr Lind, is that it is widely believed that older people are relatively poor and unwilling to spend, a view given some substance by figures from the Family Expenditure Survey of 1980 which showed that while the 50-60 age group earned substantially more than the national average, those aged between 60 and 65 fell somewhat below and the over-65s were overwhelmingly in the involved a target market of over-45s. No fewer than 50 were for targets of the under-45s or the under-35s. Ten had a broad 'all women' or 'all housewives' target. That is a fairly typical balance in our experience, and explains the problem faced by the prospective publisher of a mature market women's mon-

Mr Davies believes that the public would welcome a magazine aimed specifically at older women, but that lack of interest from advertisers ensures that such a title will not be launched.

There is no magazine produced with specifically the alert, intelligent older woman in mind. Woman and Home is one of those magazines that come closest to this ideal but even its publisher regarded with some concern signs that it was increasing its elderly readership.

But while companies profess be aiming at the younger market for sound commercial reasons, it is arguable that by doing so they are alienating a major potential market.

Rather than treat the old as a separate market, the answer could be to include them in the commercials aimed at the resent some marketing people still fear that if I put somebody from an older age group in my advertising, my product will look old-fashioned", says Mr Mo Drake, deputy chairman of Lintos, the advertising agency.

accounted for by the over-55s. What makes the problem acute - and why the marketing business is turning its attention to the issue - is not just that the significant disposable income but that people are living longer. This section of the population is getting larger.

Some firms have started to get the message, mainly in the financial field, where a number of companies are producing specific policies and advertisements for the over-50s, notably Sun Life Assurance which has been advertising its 50-plus motor policies with headlines such as "With our motor policy, a 50-year-old expert doesn't have to subsidise a 20-year-old tearaway". Saga Holidays is another exception that proves the rule.

For most marketing companies, however, the over-50s are still regarded as "non-consumers", in spite of the fact that for a number of key markets they out-perform the population as a whole.

Mr David Winton, chairman of the Taylor Nelson research company, told the conference that the 45-54 age group was a big buyer of 'modern' consumer durables, such as sandwich toasters, coffee filter machines, food processors and rotisserie

"Overall, the over-50s do seem to be an attractive market," says Mr Winton, "As their children leave home, their lives become emptier, they have more money to spend on themselves and they are often seeking a more meaningful life. Neglect them at your peril."

In the High Streets of Britain; they are trying to get to grips with the microcomputer. As consumer interest soars, and sales mushroom, many stores are seizing the chance to expand their business. Yet while retailers have no doubts about the microcomputer's significance, uncertainties continue to cloud the way these new opportunities are to be exploited.

One retail group which has grasped the micro is Dixons. The company tested a computer centre in one store at the end of 1981, and the operation went national last July, Today about Mark Souhami: Educating 30 Dixons stores have large areas devoted to computers, and every one of the group's 260 branches now has some

THE WEEK

IBI needs Britain much more than we need IBI. British membership would not only bring the organisation much needed funds (the United Kingdom subscription would be in the region of $3m) but also persuade several other Commonwealth countries to join, Membership is currently skewed towards French and Spanish speaking countries in Africa and Latin America, Worse still for IBL, the Government -French financially committed to its own expensive Centre Mondiale in Paris - is threatening to withdraw.

Nonetheless, Mr Bogod be-lieves IBI now has the managerial and technical skills to succeed. France would not really pull out because French industry is too closely involved already and because withdrawal would provoke a political outcry from French speaking members And the one way to make certain that France remained in IBI would be for Britain to join.

IBI's budget rose from $2.7m in 1977/78 to $14.5m in 1981/82 as the organization began to change from a waffling shop to a body sponsoring practical projects and training computer staff from the Third World. Activity should build up on a larger scale from pext year, when IBI is to hold a big conference in Havana with computer industry representatives to drum up more support (The programme is called SPIN, for Strategies and Policies for INformatics.)

Despite the fact that academic administrators seem to feel it would be unseemly to ape their commercial rivals for talent, academic posts grace the newspaer jobs columns.

The most prestigious academic institutions in the UK jostle for attention with job offers from more exotic climates. warwickshire began this match third in the championship, 48 points behind Middlesex, the same number of games played, feeling it was one they had to win if they were to stay in touch. On Saturday they scored 253 after winning the toss, and Middlesex had replied with 42 for your left. The start of vesterday's play was delayed by 45 minutes by overnight rain, but Barlow and Slack had put on 100 by lunch. The pitch played comfortably, but the outfield was slow. It took a really hard whack to reach the uphill boundary. The weather was cooler, but still clammy. The size of the crowd was disappointing. There cannot have been many more than 1,000 present, all told, in the prime of the day, and though many dropped in, as usual, in the evening when the offices were closing, it was a poor turn-out for an important championship match.

The afternoon's cricket was interesting. Yacht's keel of approval

Newport Rhode Island (AP) -Officials of the seven overseas entries in the America's Cup entries in the America's Cup yesterday apporved Australia II as a "valid 12-metre yacht". Announcing the decision, Sir William Fesq, of the Royal Sydney Yacht Squadron's America's Cup committee, referred to a letter from Anthony Watts, the Englishman who charried the group which measured the Cup yachts. In it Mr Watts had said all the challenger entries had been declared chgible.

Stanerra due to clash with Time Charter in Prix Foy

The Priz de l'Arc de Triomphe may be some distance away yet with may be some obtained away yet with trainers off in their hordes to Saratoga for another round of yearling sales, and the racing in this courty unremarkable, what better moment than to cast a few glances at what is France's most important

Whichever way you examine the race it is hard to escape the view that the Arc could easily be won by a filly yet again. I say yet again because there was a time when it was rare for a filly to win the Arc. It was rare for a filly to win the Arc. It was in 1972 that I chose to point out that the Arc was not a fillies' race and that you had to go back 19 years to 1953 to find the last filly, La Sorellina, to win it. No sooner had I made that observation than San San, Rescourse and Regal Excition, all fillies, finished first, second and fourth.

Since San San broke the small of Since San San broke the spell of

Since San San broke the spell of make dominance, fillies have had by far the better of the argument, with a winning ratio of six to four. In 1973 it took a horse of Rheingold's considerable ability to thwart that high-class filly Allez France, but the following year Allez France got her just manned when the heat sandher. just reward when she beat another good filly Comtesse de Loire. Since then Star Appeal and Alleged (twice)

Ivaniica struck another blow for the females in 1976 and it took a de D horse of Alleged's calibre to foil those good filliess Trillion and Dancing Maid in 1978. And fillies have had the upper hand ever since ago.

Alleged gained the second of his two victories, with first Three Traikas and then Detroit; Gold River and Akiyda, in that order all ensuring that their names would be immortalised in Longchamp's hall of time.

So what can we expect this year on Sunday, October 2. For a start on Sinday, October 2 For a start those two great competitors Time Charter and Staneara are likely to be in the line-up. Anyone who monitored Time Charter's progress less antumn, when she won the Sun Chariot Stakes and the Champion Stakes at Newmarket within a fortight, will surely have her name etched in for honours, forgetting what she has just achieved at Ascot. Add to them the names of this year's Irish Oaks winner, Give

Thanks, who reveals in soft ground, our Caks heroine Sn Princess, both of whom were paid a mighty compliment by acclimatise at Goodwood on Saturday, and Awassif, who finished a close third in last year's Arc, and is clerly coming back to her best judged on the way she ran at Ascot recently and already you have an extremely strong Aglo-Irish female challenge

The French themselves are not exactly short of goof fillies this year with escaline and Smuggly, who finished first and second in the Prix de Diane, and Rajpoura, who will now be following the trail taken by Akiyada after her good win in the Prix de Minerve at Every a week

After Time Charter's magnificent victory in the King George VI and Queen Flizabeth Diamond Stakes her trainer, Henry Candy, declined to be rushed into making a hard and fast plan. He took a few days before deciding to give the Benson and Hedges Gold Cup a miss at York, tage this reports and a miss at York, tage this reports and a miss at York. later this month, and go instead for the Prix Foy at Longchamp on September 11 as her preparatory race for the Arc.

That date now looks like being one for the notebook, quite apart from the fact that other Arc pointers should be gleaned from the Prix Neil and the Prix Vermeille, which are also run on the same afternoon.

Paying a fleeting visit to Goodwood for the first time in his

Goodwood for the first time in his life last week Stancara's owner and trainer, Frank Dunne told me that he too has decided to bypass York and plump for the Prix Foy instead of waiting a week and running: Stancara in the Joe McGrath Memorial Stakes at Leopardstown.

Dunne was aware of Candy's plan in yor Time Charter in the Brix Foy to run Time Charter in the Brix Foy but that did not deter him one bit. "I don't mind what happens in the Prix Foy just so long as my mare comes out of it well, it's the Arc I'm after," said the man who has already arrent," said me man who has airready received much admiration this season by winning two of the most coveted races at Royal Ascot with his mare in the space of four days.

Romance returns to the turf at Taunton - an oasis of sportsmanship in a desert of dollars

The thousand and one delights of Arabracing

place in winter when students of the National Hunt scene huddle together for warmth and watch unsuspecting horses and jockeys nose-dive to the ground. This would have been hard to imagine recently when a shirt-sleeved crowd basked in the sunshine to witness and abundance of over-fed amateur ockeys walk out to the paddock before the first race in an afternoon devoted to Arab horse racing. There was not a shalkh in sight.

Despite the lack of sand and camels, and Lawrence of Arabia to give the order to charge, the field got off to a good start. The colours were soom sorted out by explacyed followers. And in a couple of shakes the Arabic writing was on the wall as a blaze-faced beast that could have been Shergar bounced over the vinning line ahead of the pack.

Every horse being a winner in the minds of some enthusiastic owners of the "also rais" pitched in with varied and often highly imaginative excuses for their charges' poor Arab racing is very much and never reach the dizzy beights footballer, who has just scored a footballer, who has just scored a goal. He is slapped down the neck and fussed over by the entire family, friends and friends of friends, many of whose delight is bolstered further by having "got on" at an attractive price offered by one of the canny bookmakers in front of the stands who can be seen before the first race andving the sport's own form book. hatted stewards parade the background, a low-profile presence ensuring that the sport runs smoothly. The Jockey Club have given their blessing to the Arab Horse Society, who have organized five meetings during the summer months. The races are open to pure and part-bred Arabs and to Anglo-Arabs - the result of mating with a thoroughbred - and the distances are from five furlongs to two miles. Perhaps the most significant development in the last three years, one which may unsettle the purist breeder, is that while prices will

Which may be considered only right and proper, After all, the blue-blooded, multi-million-dollar king of the turf descends directly from Arab fore-fathers. The breeding of the Arab in this country began at the beginning of the reign of Henry I, who was presented with the gift of two Arabian horses.

Later, stallions and mares were kept at the Royal Stud at Newmarket in the reign of Charles I, the foundation breeding line began with an Eastern sire, Heimsley Turk. Among his stock was Blackles, the dam of Marske. who in 1764 sired the celebrated Eclipse, one of the greatest racchorses of all time.

Now the Arab itself is surging back. Having been associated with the turf as far back as the Roman the nurt as far back as the Roman occupation, the racing Arab reemerged in 1884 when t Jockey Club allowed meetings to take place at Newmarket and Sandown Park. The sporting sheets of the time were highly critical, and the experiment ended.

The beauty of these amateur meetings on the flat is that they recall the heady days - Anglo-Arabian fragrance, if you like - of racing as it was, before the almighty dollar sign bought out sportsmanship, when people who loved horses faced them against each other to see who was the fastest, and had fun in the

On Saturday at Taunton the Arab fraternity return to the fray. Riders will fall off, dogs will tail their owners to the start, tears will be shed, races will be lost and won. But you can bet your last ryal on this -that just as at Hereford, when the beauty of Arabs cantering to the start momentarily brought a nearby cricket match to a balt. Taunton will demonstrate once again why this most handsome and oldest of breeds has never been allowed to become

COMMERCIAL LAWYERS CLINTONS

Requires solicitors for general commercial work (including insolvency and entertainment). Enthusiasm and adaptability as important as experience although we will appoint at least one solicitor able to deal unsupervised with substantial clients.

Please apply with full C.V. or telephone for further details: Clintons (Reference SRH), Wellington House, 6/8 Upper St Martins Lane, London WC2 Telephone 01-379 6080.

Newly Qualified Solicitor with partnership prospects

Our client is a medium sized suburban firm, with an office in Lincoln's Inn and has a total of 8 partners and 80 staff, including 6 Assistant Solicitors and 6 Articled Clerks. They have an enviable reputation and are expanding successfully, including the opening of a new branch/office. The need is to recruit a newly qualified solicitor, who will take responsibility for some of the conveyancing activities. It is essential that the solicitor has the personal qualities to build additional business and depending on ability will become involved later in general practice. The successful candidate must be proinvolved later in general practice. The successful candidate must be professionally and commercially sound, with a good intellect and strong personal qualities. Given success, there will be a distinct opportunity in the future to be asked to join their essentially youthful practice under an advantageous partnership agreement.

In the first instance, please send full personal and career details quoting reference no: 2070 to Mr. G. E. Forester, Corporate Resourcing Group Limited, 6 Westminster Palace Gardens, Artillery Row, London SW1P 1RL. Telephone 01-222 5555.

Jancis Robinson presents The Wine Programme (Channel 4, 8.30 pm)

 The remarkable theory that emotions play a major role in the conquest of cancer is examined in a two-part programme beginning tonight, MIND OVER CANCER (BBC1 9:25pm). Experiments, mostly performed in the United States, have revealed a link between cancer patient's mental attitude and the successful elimination of cancer cells. The programme comes up with some convincing evidence that passive patients, quietly resigned to a cancerous death, are unlikely to survive atthough they receive exactly the same treatment as others in a similar state to because they give vent to their Dr Miniam Stoppard reports on a disturbing feature of the National CHOICE

Health Service in A LOTTERY FOR LIFE (TTV 10.30pm). Dr Stoppard reveals that life-saving treatment for kidney failure patients depends on where the patient lives - in Manchester for example three quarters of sufferers will die, a very much higher ratio than those that live in the south. The cause of this is the availability of kidney machines on which to have dialysis treatment. There is no central register of spare capacity to which doctors can refer if none are tree in a particular area and doctors, in particular in the north, are sentencing to death people who would be able to live normal lives if they lived in the south Jancis Robinson presents a

US angry at 'bias' over air fares

By Michael Baily Transport Editor

The British Government is being accused on both sides of the Atlantic of artificially keeping up Atlantic air and flouting American law to ease the path to British Airways, towards privatization.

In the past weeks the Government or the Civil Aviation Authority have: Refused an application by British Atlantic Airways, a new airline formed partly by former Laker staff, to start a new London to New York service at a £329 one-way business-class fare compared with £438 on

British Airways; Refused an application by TWA to introduce a new autumn economy return of £249 to New York, compared with a stan-

Invoked the trade protection act to prevent Laker liquidators proceeding in the American courts against British Caledonian for allegedly acting together to put Laker out of business. The last decision is seen by the American government and US airlines as a cynical attempt to save £1000m on the cost of privatising BA by avoiding action in the US courts.

The Government will in any case have to spend £500m on capital restructuring, to prepare BA for flotation, but if the action goes ahead, and the airlines lose with maximum damages, the cost could rise to £1,500m it is estimated.

In the British Atlantic case, the company's managing direct-or, Mr Randolph Fields, yesterday described the Civil Aviation Authorities decision as "naked protectionism" favour of BA and B-Cal.

In the TWA case, the airline said in New York yesterday: "We do not see how the British Government can refuse our new fare after allowing the £99 single

of People Express."
But there is still hope of lower fares in the autumn as a result of a special conference called by the International Air Transport Association in Toronto next week for the airlines themselves to agree on a new fare structure rather than come forward with competing low fares which in the CAA's view are "predatory' and "hot cost-related".

group of three Tamils. They caught one, beat him up, threw him to the ground and stoned him. I don't know if he died. "It was terrible. Nobody did a thing to help. Even the police turned a blind eye." Mr Clive Templeman, from Wigston, Leicestershire, said that they passed the time by playing cricket against the holiday centre staff.

"As we were not allowed out the staff organized cricket matches against the tourists. We always seemed to win but I think they let us. The people were very good to us and although the island was tense none of the violence was directed at us."

 COLOMBO: The Sri Lankan Government has relaxed the curiew a little and tightened press censorship a good deal (Michael Hamlyn writes).

Press photography was yesterday banned and journalists will no longer be allowed to move freely during curfews. Instead, passes are being issued allowing movement only between their hotels and the censor's office.

The ban on photographs was quickly enforced when an ludian photographer was de-tained for three hours and his film impounded. Censorship now includes everything relat-ing to security, law and order and the movement of "dis-placed persons" in Sri Lanka, and reporting of related events A series of arrests continued yesterday in connexion with the banning of three political parties, but the Government refused to say how many were Food shortage, page 5

Letter from Santiago

Two faces of Cuba and a Castro pep talk

Fidel Castro's Cuba had an anniversary to celebrate and opened its doors to the world for the festivities. Cuba also had its carnival, the yearly burst of dancing, drinking and dressing up in costumes that goes back to the country's Spanish and African past.

For outsiders, it was a week to get a glimpse of two very different aspects of this isolated society.

There was Cuba the Communist state, singing the Internationale and commemorating the attack on a barracks here that marked the start of the Castro revolution. There was also Cuba the spirited Latin nation that comes to life after 10 pm, ready to carouse in the streets until dawn.

The importance to Cubans of the annual carnival - tied to the planting of the sugar crop rather than to lent - seemed to be symbolized by the women who came to hear Dr Castro speak one afternoon at the opening of a factory. They were wearing their hair in curiers for the night ahead. The celebrations last week also gave outsiders a chance to see two sides of Dr Castro: the internationalist railing before the world's press against Yankeeism and imperialism, and the folksy Fidel, talking to workers about the society he is building Speaking in Santiago on the anniversary of the failed attempt on the Moncada barracks here on July 26. 1953, his theme was one of fierce independence. He spoke proudly of Cuba's military strength and vowed that never would anyone else have to fight Cuba's fights.

Next day, at the Celia Sanchez Manduley textile plant, Dr Castro, flanked by Mr Nikolai Tarasov, the Soviet Minister of Light Industry, listed ways in which Cuba Depended on the Soviet Union, where many of the new factory's workers were trained.

The Russians, he said, not only built this factory complex, thought to be among the largest in the hemisphere, but also were responsible for five other huge projects, among them a nuclear power station being built in Clearuegos, an oil refinery and a nickel plant. His debt to Moscow and Marxism-Leninism paid, Dr Castro assumed his father-ofthe-country image to recall for the workers the accomplish ments of his nearly 25 years in power. An hour of statistics followed, with short example, the uses of cotton and polyester (both to be produced by the factory) There was a short pep talk on physical fitness and the problem of obesity in Caba. Dr Castro, nearly 57 years old, has been encouraging Cubans to shape up, to jog and to cut down on smoking and drinking. He then returned to his seat on the podium to fidget through the rest of the ceremony, looking watch twice during the singing of the Internationale. At his side. Mr Maurice Bishop, the Prime Minister of Grenada, and the Soviet representatives stood stiffly to attention.

To a first-time visitor to Cuba, fresh from the mostly unhappy countries of Central America, the acheivements of the Castro years are not hard to see. There are clean streets, clean water, healthy young people and impressive educational institutions.

But the economy - either battered by the United States embargo or, depending on one's point of view, crippled by the loss of a middle class and the suppression of private initiative, or both has serious problems that are apparent in everyday life.

Housing and transport are in short supply, and the Government admits it. American jeans, by con-trast, cost $150 (about £100) a

Dr Castro is fond of reminding his audiences that Cuba has built a society well advanced of those of other Latin American nations. In 25 years, he said last week, the Government had never had to use a soldier, a policeman or a fireman against the people.

Nonetheless, Dr Castro is in many ways the Latin man on horseback, a macho figure in battledress, like other past and present Latin leaders. At the Celia Sanchez factory, named for Dr Castro's guerrilla colleague and old friend who died two years ago of cancer, he accepted the gift of a rifle from Mr Bishop. At his side sat the Cuban Interior Minister, in battledress, a pistol strapped to his hip.
